Навчально-методичний посібник “The Guide to the Series: “Atypical” Teacher’s book розроблено з метою збагачення змісту, удосконалення навичок слухання автентичного матеріалу та підвищення якості філологічної підготовки студентів 1-3 курсів, які вивчають англійську мову як фахову дисципліну або другу іноземну мову у закладах вищої освіти.

Посібник містить ключі до завдань, що уможлиблює проконтролювати якість розуміння англомовних текстів студентами, а також забезпечить швидкий та ефективний контроль розуміння автентичного мовлення та виконання усіх завдань студентами на заняттях з іноземної мови. Ґрунтовно розроблені завдання для самостійної роботи студентів по темі Family relationship роблять посібник ефективним та логічно структурованим.

Студентам запропоновано набір завдань різних видів, а також рекомендації, як самостійно працювати над розвитком навичок слухання та сприймання іноземної мови. Матеріал посібника можна використовувати у закладах вищої освіти, а також для проведення факультативних занять у гімназіях, гуманітарних ліцеях, загальноосвітніх школах із поглибленим вивченням іноземних мов, для слухачів курсів та осіб, які самостійно вивчають англійську мову.

Preface

The manual consists of listening tasks accompanied by authentic videos. Each task includes clear instructions how to do it correctly. The typical task types include: multiple choice, true/false, matching and gap filling, translation and discussion. Some tips how to do different types of tasks:

TRUE/FALSE

In this type of task, you need to decide if the given statements convey the same information as used in the text (and mark them True) or different (and mark them False).

- Remember that your task is to decide if a statement is true or false in reference to the text, not if it is true in general;
- remember that the questions follow the order of the information in the text;
- many true or false statements are built in such a way that the information from the text is conveyed by means of synonyms or antonyms.

MULTIPLE CHOICE

In a multiple choice task you need to rule out the incorrect answers and choose one answer that is correct. The correct answer should contain the same information as the video.

- Before you start watching the video, first read all the questions and then find in the video the parts that correspond to each question – it can be a single word, a sentence or a paragraph;
- remember that the questions follow the order of the information in the video. It is safe to assume that the answer to question number two will be somewhere before the answer to question number three. This might help you if you are not sure where to look for the answer to a particular question;
- never choose the answer on the basis of one word, as both the correct and incorrect answers may contain the same words used in the video. Pay attention to the general context of the story, which will help you rule out the answers which are not consistent with it;

- when choosing the correct answer, always double check if the information in the questions is the same as what is in the text. You may want to underline the parts of the episode that contain the answer you need, which will help you finish the task more quickly;

- it is important for you to be able to locate the main idea of the story and separate it from ideas which are only details or illustration of the main idea. This will help you answer the questions correctly as a lot of wrong options in the exam questions ask about ideas of secondary importance.

GAPPED TEXT (MATCHING)

This is a special type of matching task in which you have a text with some parts (full sentences or parts of sentences) missing from it. As with all the other types of reading tasks, before you start doing the task, read the text ignoring the gaps to get the overall idea of what it is about.

- When completing the gaps, look for words which are used to refer to sentences that come before or after the gaps. Pay attention to:

* cause and effect markers: if a sentence talks about an action, then the next one will most probably talk about its effect;

* pronouns and determiners: if they are used in the sentences, they refer to the people or things that are already mentioned in the text;

* chronology markers: look for words like afterwards, eventually, finally which show the order of events;

* vocabulary paraphrases: neighbouring sentences often refer to the same person, thing or concept but use different words or phrases to describe them.

GAP FILLING

In this type of task, you will get a set of gapped sentences, a form, or a fact file with some information missing. Your task will be to complete the gaps using the information you find in the text. The sentences you need to complete are only paraphrases of what you read in the text – they convey the same information, but they are not phrased in the same way.

- Sometimes the instructions specify the number of words you can write, so make sure your answers are the right length. If the instructions say you have to write one or two words, your solution of three words will not be accepted, although otherwise it may be correct;
- read the gapped sentences carefully before you start doing the task and try to guess what word category is missing from each gap. If you do this, it will be easier for you to find the correct answers;
- the sentences you have to complete are given in the same order as the information in the text. Bear this in mind when you work through the task.

Series overview

Atypical is a contemporary American coming-of-age dramedy that explores adolescence, neurodiversity, and family transformation within the framework of modern society. The series centers on Sam Gardner, an 18-year-old high school student on the autism spectrum, who decides to pursue romantic relationships and greater personal autonomy. His desire for independence functions as the primary narrative catalyst, initiating both individual growth and systemic change within his family structure.

The series situates Sam's developmental journey within broader sociocultural contexts, including social inclusion, identity formation, and the transition from adolescence to adulthood. Rather than presenting autism solely as a limitation, Atypical portrays it as one aspect of a multidimensional identity, thereby contributing to contemporary discussions of neurodiversity and representation in media.

Simultaneously, the narrative devotes significant attention to the Gardner family as an interconnected system. Sam's mother struggles with overprotection and the challenge of relinquishing control, his father attempts to redefine his paternal role, and his sister Casey undergoes her own process of self-discovery, particularly in relation to ambition, belonging, and romantic identity. Through these parallel storylines, the series emphasizes that personal growth is rarely isolated; it reverberates across relational networks.

Blending humor with emotional realism, Atypical examines themes such as autonomy, intimacy, family cohesion, and social adaptation. Ultimately, the series offers a nuanced portrayal of coming of age in the context of neurodiversity, positioning growth not as a linear process but as a complex negotiation between individual aspirations and collective responsibility.

III. After watching

1. How does Sam deal with social challenges in this episode? Do you think he made progress in understanding relationships? Why or why not?
2. Describe the relationship between Sam and his parents in this episode. How do they support him? Are there any conflicts?

Suggested answers:

1. How does Sam deal with social challenges? Did he make progress in understanding relationships?

In Episode 6, Sam still struggles with social situations, but he shows some growth. He tries to follow social rules more consciously instead of acting only on logic. For example, he makes an effort to understand other people's feelings rather than just stating facts. He also practices how to behave appropriately in different situations instead of avoiding them.

I think he does make some progress in understanding relationships, but it is slow and incomplete. He begins to realize that relationships are not just about rules, but also about emotions, empathy, and compromise. However, he still misinterprets some social cues and sometimes says things that hurt others unintentionally. So, his progress is real, but he still has a lot to learn.

2. Describe the relationship between Sam and his parents. How do they support him? Are there conflicts?

Sam has a very close but complicated relationship with his parents.

His mother (Elsa) is very protective and deeply involved in his life. She supports him emotionally, helps him navigate social situations, and often tries to make things easier for him. However, this sometimes becomes a problem because she can be too controlling and doesn't always let Sam become independent.

His father (Doug) is more encouraging of Sam's independence. He supports Sam by pushing him to try new things, take risks, and grow as a person. Doug often tries to treat Sam more like a typical young adult rather than someone who always needs special protection.

There are conflicts in this episode. Elsa and Doug sometimes disagree about how much freedom Sam should have. Elsa wants to protect him, while Doug believes Sam needs to experience challenges on his own. This tension also affects Sam, because he receives mixed messages from his parents.

Overall, both parents love Sam and want what is best for him, but they struggle to balance protection and independence.

A Change for the Better

The other day, Emma sat quietly in her room, staring at the ceiling. Everything felt like the same old routine — wake up, go to work, come home exhausted. She had no energy left for herself, and even her parents had started to worry.

One evening, her best friend Lily came over. Emma broke the news to her: she had decided to quit her stressful job. Lily was shocked but supportive. “Is that good or bad news?” she asked with a smile. “Honestly, I’m not sure,” Emma replied, “but I just knew for real that I couldn’t go on like this any more.”

After leaving her job, Emma took up a hobby — water color painting. She spent hours mixing colors, learning techniques, and losing herself in creativity. It became a part of her herself-care routine, helping her relieve stress and clear her head after long, emotional days.

At first, her parents didn’t approve of her decision. They thought she was being irresponsible. But as time passed, they saw how much happier and healthier she had become. In the end, they realized it had been the right choice — good, not bad.

Нещодавно Емма тихо сиділа у своїй кімнаті, дивлячись на стелю. Усе здавалося звичним і рутинним — прокинутись, піти на роботу, повернутися додому втомленою. У неї не було енергії навіть для себе, і навіть батьки почали хвилюватися.

Одного вечора до неї прийшла найкраща подруга Лілі. Емма поділилася з нею новиною: вона вирішила піти з роботи, що забирала в неї всі сили. Лілі була шокована, але підтримала. «Це хороша чи погана новина?» — запитала вона з усмішкою. «Чесно кажучи, я не впевнена», — відповіла Емма, — «але я просто знала, що більше так не можу жити».

Покинувши роботу, Емма взялася за хобі — малювання аквареллю. Вона проводила години, змішуючи фарби, вивчаючи техніки та повністю занурюючись у творчість. Це стало частиною її рутини по догляду за собою, допомагаючи знімати стрес і очищати голову після довгих, емоційно виснажливих днів.

Спочатку батьки не схвалювали її рішення. Вони думали, що вона безвідповідальна. Але з часом вони побачили, як багато щасливішою та здоровішою вона стала. В кінці кінців, вони зрозуміли, що це був правильний вибір — хороший, а не поганий.
